FISCAL ANALYSIS

ASSUMPTION

Officials at the Office of the Secretary of State assume it is unclear whether this legislation requires that all published dates must include the descriptors A.D. and B.C., or whether the current common practice of no designation could continue. If libraries can continue to use just the year with no qualifying designation, then there will be no impact resulting from this legislation. If libraries are required to add A.D. to published dates, the cost could be in the hundreds of thousands in order to replace handheld date due stamps, revise software stamps and published dated print material.

Oversight assumes that this proposal would not impact state funds as agencies could continue to just use the year with no qualifying designation.
